THE SPANISH TOREADOR.

There is probably no sport in the world so lucrative as that of Spain's national sport, bull fighting, and the statement that there are twenty-three famous toreadors who earn annually $200,000 is by no means exaggerated. In Madrid one finds the toreador, the fair prince of the senorita, at the Hotel Ingles elbowing with English and American visitors. If he dines out with friends he will invariably choose the ideal room, the meeting place of the Spanish aristocracy and foreign diplomats. When he visits a theater he must have the best box in the house.

He smokes the very best cigars, and not the traditional petillos (home-made cigarettes) so dear to the Spaniard. He drinks the choicest wines from South Spain and France's famous champagnes. He is also most fastidious in his fashions, wearing the best of English clothes.

Indeed, so jealous is he of his personal appearance that he employs a special coiffeur who calls on him every morning and helps him to hide his coquetry, the diminutive pig tail, beneath his usually heavy crop of black hair.

His nails are also delicately manicured. Let their rough appearance should mar the brilliancy of the priceless diamonds which he stands as a toreador compels him to wear.

He is without a stolid and serious-minded man. He never smiles. His life has made him a stoic, and his smile he reserves for the ring.

He is also the most religious of mortals at any rate in Spain. It is indeed curious to see him invoking the intercession of heaven before taking up his place in the procession and marching into the arena.

He is likewise most superstitious. Evil befall the man who dares open an umbrella in his presence or who passes between him and a friend with whom he may be talking.

The toreador who on the morning of a bull fight may have fallen a victim to one of those two events, will pay a heavy fine rather than face the terrors of bulls.

There are at present two toreadors who earn anything up to $50,000 a year. They are Bombita and Machiquito.

The former is married to the daughter of a French nobleman with a highly historical name, and the latter to a Scotch woman. — Pall Mall Gazette.

A fireman on the Milwaukee railroad crawled out on the roof while the train was moving at a good speed and pushed a two-year-old child from the track with his foot, thus saving it from certain death.

State Senator Marshall Black who caused the crash of the Palo Alto Building and Loan association refused to resign from the legislature and the recall may be used to oust him.

Gleo Boulanger, a French Canadian shot his wife and then himself, in the dining room of a fashionable Vancouver hotel. He injured himself fatally but the wife will recover.

Because her mother accused her of the theft of 50 cents a young girl of Burlingame, California, shot herself in the side with her father's revolver.

showing of their men. The strength of the Blues was shown when the Reds retreated into the hills overlooking Schofield and there took up a defensive position from which the Blues this morning tried to dislodge them in the face of a withering fire.

The Blues left camp almost at dawn and within a short time were engaged in the attack on the enemy. The battle raged even longer than that of yesterday, and at times was hotter. The Blue army was forced to go into the hottest firing that can be imagined and made a splendid showing.

What the morrow will bring forth cannot be foretold. The maneuvers are carried on with absolute secrecy as to the future and the rules of warfare are being rigidly observed.

This is realistic maneuvering. The conduct of the camps and the disposition of the forces is looked after with as much care and effectiveness as if the men were actually engaged in war with a foreign foe.

The battle today was the acme of realism. Shortly after 7 o'clock the battle was opened by the Red artillery under cover. The Reds have been driven back to the last hill overlooking the sea, and the results are indecisive at 12 o'clock today.

The second infantry again covered itself with glory, both in the march in from Pearl City and in this morning's severe work.

It looks to the Star-Bulletin special correspondent with the Blues, from his position on the water tower that the Blue cavalry had succeeded in making a flank movement on the Red artillery.

The second infantry poured in a severe fire on one of the Red batteries at a distance of 800 yards. The battery quickly unlimbered but it looked to the Blues as if the Red artillery was annihilated.

ORTON'S CAVALRY HAS HARD TIME OF IT did get into contact with the Red column, or, in fact, into the fight at all, until the signal bombs had been fired to announce the end of the battle.

Captain Orton, who commanded the three troops that mysteriously disappeared from Schofield in the early hours of Sunday morning, certainly had all the troubles coming to a cavalry commander. He learned through his patrols of the landing of the marines and of their strongly entrenched position commanding the approach to Wailuku, and took good care to give them a wide berth. Harassed to the eastward by a small detachment of Red cavalry sent out under Lieutenant Baird to reconnoiter and assist the marines in holding the position, there was nothing left for Captain Orton but to tackle the deep gulch with almost unclimbable banks that separated him from both his own and the Red forces. He tackled the job of hard riding, and might have succeeded in scrambling out of the obstructions had it not commenced to rain hard. This troubled the difficulties, and when they were finally overcome and the squadron on level ground again, it was too late to get into the game at all. This cavalry, however, didn't see the bomb fired, and charged a battery of Red artillery after the operations had ceased. It was hard luck to have the gallant fight against odds wasted. But now there is one point on which everybody connected with the war agrees, and that is that the marines were certainly successful in their mission, and that they undoubtedly protected the main Red column from a flank attack. Had Captain Orton's squadron been left to its own devices, the Reds would not have reached the high ground in the record time they did.

The cavalry that formed the left flank of the Blue line when the main forces came into contact near the site of the new post, suffered heavily from a concentrated fire of the Red artillery.

The Reds' wagon train did not get its order to leave Kawaihapai until nearly 1 p. m., and as the result did not arrive with the men's blankets, rolls and company cook outfit until after 6 o'clock. The result was a camp pitched by moonlight, and the marvel is that this was done with so little bother and confusion. The cavalry and artillery had their blankets, rolls with them, and were able to pitch shelter tents as soon as the camp site was selected. The Reds have proven themselves to be in splendid shape for field service, a very small percentage being on sick report. Out of the entire first infantry only three men were forced to drop out on account of sore feet, and of these one was suffering from an old injury.

BIG PROPERTIES CHANGE HANDS

Three instruments were filed for record yesterday, which involve transactions aggregating $392,000.

One is the deed of trust to E. Spaulding and F. Klump, trustees, by the Kelahe Water Co., Ltd., of all of its property, including that of the Kohala Ditch Co., held under a deed of assignment from John T. McCrosson and associates, to secure an issue of $250,000 of the company's bonds, made for the purpose of completing certain subsidiary ditches and reservoirs. The bonds are made payable in thirty years, and redeemable in ten years, at the Bank of Honolulu, Ltd., and bear interest of 6 per cent per annum.

Another document is a mortgage made by Alfred W. Carter, trustee, for Annie T. K. Parker Smart, to Samuel M. Damon, Allen W. T. Bottomley and James L. Cockburn, co-partners in the firm of Bishop & Co., for $100,000 advance made by the mortgagor for the purchase of certain real and personal property on the island of Hawaii, payable in one year with interest at 7 per cent. The mortgage covers lands in Waimea and Hamakua districts, Hawaii, aggregating 147,447.20 acres.

The third instrument is a deed of sale from Alice K. Macfarlane, wife of Walter Macfarlane, to Mary Beatrice Beckley, wife of George C. Beckley, of two pieces of land at Waikiki, one on the southwest, and the other on the northeast side of Diamond Head road, being portions of the late James Campbell's lands and of the so-called residence grounds of Leahi mentioned in the fourth article of Campbell's will. The consideration is $32,600.

not be spending the good Democratic money to bring it to the court's attention.

SECOND ADD NEW PHASE. L. L. S. "We have thought it such a good point that we have placed it first, ahead of the contention that the candidates failed to comply with the law in not having their party affiliation on the papers when first filed with the Secretary.

"We believe the Maui candidates made a serious error. We cannot conceive how any legislative nominee can be a candidate of the Territory, within the construction of Section 51. He can be only a candidate in the district in which he lives."

There is a possibility that the arguments before the Supreme Court, in this case may be continued further tomorrow, as attorney Ashford, who is expected to appear before the higher tribunal, is also associate counsel in the John Gomez Henriques murder case, which was continued a few days ago to be taken up early tomorrow morning.

MR. PFOTENHAUER'S HEALTH

In response to a query from Hackfeld & Co., a cablegram giving information on the condition of Mr. Pfotenhauer was received today. Mr. Pfotenhauer suffered a relapse some days ago, and from this the patient is improving. His friends do not yet feel that the danger point is passed.

WHAT IS A BANK?

Some trusted man's pocket was the first bank. A neighbor said to the man: "Sir, I know that your house is safer than mine. Therefore, take my two pieces of gold and keep them for me."

After a time when a number of his neighbors had also come to him and asked him to care for their gold, the man said:

"Since all of you are not likely to ask for the return of your money at the same time, and since I have need of money in my business, I will not merely put your money into one of my chests, but I will use it. I'm sure that I shall be able to pay back to those of you who want it whatever sums you ask, and meanwhile make it earn a profit for myself. So we shall both benefit."

When that occurred competition among men with strong boxes sprang up. Some claimed to be able to take care of money who were, in fact, not fit to be trusted. Bankers acquired a bad reputation among the people because of the defaults of such incompetent and dishonest men. Community—or government—regulation was deemed desirable, and so national and state banks, run according to rules laid down by the state, came into being.

In some of our states, like Illinois, very primitive banking practices are still tolerated. More than 500 private banks which do not have to make reports to any community authority are doing business there.

It is a situation which has led a Chicago banker to say:

"Anybody can start a private bank if he gets a lot of furniture and brass railings and selects a name and opens up for business." These banks are failing at an alarming rate—one went under in Chicago lately and left assets of exactly $200 to satisfy depositors of more than $35,000.

There is no real need for the unregulated private banker today. Banking is a semipublic function, and it should be overlooked by the state.—John M. Oskinson.

A west bound Rock Island train was held up near Howe Oklahoma. The express and mail cars were robbed, the bandits dynamiting the safes in the express car.

TELLS VALUE OF CHARACTER

At the first student assembly of the year which was held in Cooke Hall, Y. M. C. A. building, last night, Harry N. Holmes gave an interesting address to the students of the night school in which he showed the great importance of character in preparing a boy for his life work.

A large number of students remained after the school to hear his talk, and during the twenty-five minutes that he spoke, held their attention splendidly. Secretary Larimer of the educational department, was much pleased with the success of the first student assembly, as they are to become a regular feature of the night school classes. They are to be held every two weeks under the joint direction of the education and the religious committees.

Men who have not had a chance to hear Mr. Holmes up to this will have an opportunity to do so tonight at the meeting which will be held in Davies Memorial Chapel, St. Andrew's Cathedral, where he will speak upon the subject, "The New Era of Modern Methods." Mr. Holmes' entertaining and forceful manner has won out with the local men, and wherever he speaks he is being enthusiastically received.

LOWER COURT IS REVERSED

The decision of Judge C. F. Parsons, of Hilo, denying the bill of plaintiffs and sustaining demurrer of defendants in the suit brought by Maria de Souza and Hilda Serpa to have set aside a deed executed by the former in favor of Manuel Soares, is reversed by the Supreme Court in an opinion handed down this morning. The case, entitled Maria de Souza versus Manuel Soares and Virginia Soares, is remanded to the Circuit Court for rehearing.

Maria de Souza is seeking to have rescinded the conveyance of a piece of property which she avers she deeded over to Manuel Soares, her brother-in-law, while she was under undue influence and weak-minded, following the death of her husband. She asserts that the sum of $1100 which she received for the land was grossly inadequate, though the value of the land is not set forth in her bill. The deed was executed June 24, 1908, after which she went to California and resided, eventually repudiating her deed and offering to pay back the money for the return of the deed. Her brother-in-law declined to make the second exchange, however.

FREAR APPROVES HILO STREET RAILWAY BOND

Governor Frear has approved the $5000 bond obtained yesterday by L. S. Connors, promoter of the Hilo street railway, which guarantees to the county of Hawaii the construction of the first section of the road. The bond was taken by Assistant Attorney General A. G. Smith who left for Hilo this morning, and will be signed by Connors' Associates there, when it will be placed on file there.

Mr. J. A. Bath will speak at the noonday lunch of the Honolulu Ad Club to be held in the Palm Cafe. Mr. Bath has a rotating topic that has been generally entitled "Tenements and Billboards."

Newman Erb of New York speaking for the Denver Northwestern and Pacific railroad at Denver offered to complete the line to Salt Lake immediately if Colorado would aid in putting the tunnel through the continental divide, granting other lines use of the tunnel as well.

A band of 1800 Mexican rebels attacked and nearly annihilated a small federal force near Huamantla. Federal officers were killed. Horrible atrocities were committed on the prisoners.
